

NATIVE MEATS
that are choice, select and have been well fed.
No will fed Pork or Poultry cut in our market.
NATIVE GUINEAS
NATIVE BROILERS
NATIVE FOWL
NATIVE ROASTERS
NATIVE PORK SPARERIB
NATIVE PORK HAMS
NATIVE PORK HEADS for Sauce
NATIVE SUMMER LAMBS
NATIVE MILK FED VEAL
More NATIVE POULTRY than any other market in New England.

SOMERS BROS.
nov3d

The Latest Novelties
in Gold and Silver

The Plaut-Cadden Co.
Jewelers and Silversmiths,
Established 1872.

NOW IS THE TIME TO ORDER YOUR
Winter Suit and Overcoat.
LET US MAKE YOU ONE.
JOHN KUKLA, Merchant Tailor, oct26d Franklin Square.

Our Improved
Bronchial
Lozenges
will relieve Coughs, Colds, Hoarseness, Bronchitis, Asthma, and all affections of the throat. Large boxes 10c at DUNN'S PHARMACY,
50 Main Street.
sept28d

HAILE CLUB
142 Main St.
French Restaurants

Ladies' Restaurant for Haile Club Members, Second Floor, facing Main street.
Restaurant for Open House Club Members, Second Floor, looking on garden.
Dinner—12 to 2—at fixed price—
20 cents Ladies' Restaurant; 35 cents
Open House Club restaurant.
Supper—6 to 7—a la carte.
The popular Wednesday Evening
Dinner has been resumed—6 to 8 o'clock.

WEDNESDAY NOON, NOV. 3, 1909.
LUNCH—35c.
CREAM OF CORN
STUFFED BRIDGE
BOILED LEG OF LAMB
CAPER SAUCE
SPINACH
SALAD
SNOW PUDDING
CAKE
ALSO A LA CARTE.

New Fall Toys

The popular "Dux Toys" in Pelicans, Crows, Dogs, Grasshoppers—25c up.
Esquimaux Dolls, Rag Dolls, Stuffed Bears, Lions, Rabbits, Opossums, Elephants, Horses, Etc.

MRS. EDWIN FAY, Franklin Square
nov3d

Geo. Ehrets
Extra Lager at the Wauregan House
Cafe.

Wauregan House Cafe
THE PARKER-DAYENPORT CO.,
Proprietors.

WALL PAPERS

Our first consignment for Fall and Spring received.
Styles the Best, Prices the Lowest.
Call and see them.
Now taking orders for Painting, Paper Hanging and Decorating.

P. F. MURTAGH,
Telephone. 92-94 West Main St.
oct19d

FUNERAL ORDERS
Artistically Arranged by HUNT . . . The Florist,
Tel. 130. Lafayette Street.
Jun16d

NOTICE

Dr. Louise Franklin Miner is now located in her new office, Broad Hall, Room 1.

Office hours, 1 to 4 p. m.
Telephone 660. aug17d

WHEN you want to put your business before the public, there is no medium better than the Bulletin. Our columns are the Bulletin.

The Bulletin.

Norwich, Wednesday, Nov. 3, 1909.

VARIOUS MATTERS

Cooler weather is promised.

Tuesday's showers were good while they lasted.

German Lutherans have been celebrating the Reformation festival.

Red Men's whist tonight at A. O. H. hall, Austin block. Tickets 25c couple—adv.

Many trees are still covered with leaves in spite of the late date, due to the fact that there have been no severe rain and wind storms this fall.

Fatalities for October in Connecticut total 40, according to unofficial records. Of this number 46 were accidental deaths, 13 suicidal and one homicide.

Milkmen and other early risers have to depend upon artificial light just now, as it is not dark yet until 4.42. An even five hours has been taken from the day's length.

Washington-Sunset route to California—Tourist sleeping car four times weekly without change. Personally conducted. Berth, $3.50. 170-228 Washington street, Boston—adv.

On November 1, Connecticut town clerks were required to report the number of hunters' licenses issued. The returns indicate that the fish and game commissioners of the state.

The rush of the freight traffic on the New Haven road continues. This week a number of extra freight trains have been despatched from New Haven to the Harlem River junction of the road with the west, to haul freight to Midway and to Hartford.

At the recent national convention of the American Roadmakers' association held in Columbus, O., Highway Commissioner James H. MacDonald was honored for the fifth consecutive time with the presidency of the association.

Horace Johnson predicts about the third day of November a local disturbance of little note. From the 11th to the 14th of November, he says, there will be a general disturbance. President Taft is likely to be favored by one of Willis L. Moore's bright, sunny days, such as he had on inaugural day, March 4.

THE KING'S MESSENGERS.

Miss Della D. Leavens One of the Eleven New Missionaries Gone to Foreign Shores.

The November number of the Missionary Herald has a fine likeness of Miss Della Leavens, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. J. Leavens of this city, in a group of eight young people who have gone out as missionaries the past year. Referring to the mailing of 23 missionaries, it states that eleven go out for the first time. Of the eleven Miss Leavens is one, while her brother has preceded her by a few months. Of Miss Leavens' home life, she says: Miss Della D. Leavens comes to the service of the board after considerable experience as a missionary in the south. She was graduated in 1901. She served under the American Missionary association as a teacher for three years in Saluda, N. C., and afterwards for two years at Pleasant Hill, Tenn. Her work has been in the normal departments, in which she has had great success. She now carries out her student volunteer pledge by going to North China. She will represent Smith college in China, and her commission as missionary of the American board was given to her at a convocation service in Northampton on Sunday, October 3. With her on October 20 sailed Francis Chaney, destined to the Shanai mission, probably to be located at Pen Cho Fu. The Herald refers to the missionaries as "The King's Messengers."

FORMER COUNTY HOME BOY

John Chadwick Was Crushed and Fatally Injured.

John Chadwick, 17 years of age, of Waterford, was perhaps fatally injured when he was struck by a trolley on Tuesday morning, when he attempted to board a moving train at the station. Chadwick lost his hold on the grab handles and fell beneath the wheels. The trolley passed over the left arm and leg, severing those members. The young man was rushed to the hospital, and it is feared he will die. Chadwick asked that Leonard Williams of Waterford should be informed of his injuries. Young Chadwick was committed to the County home in this city several years ago, his father and mother having died. Sometime following his commitment the young man was allowed to go to the farm of Leonard N. Williams in Waterford, where he has made his home for the past five years. Last July Chadwick started to make a visit to the western states. He was on his way home when the injuries that will probably result in his death took place. A message received by Mr. Williams recently from the boy stated that he was in Kansas City and would reach home in a short time. Young Chadwick died at two o'clock Tuesday afternoon at Fulton, as it was learned in a letter from his despatch. Whether the remains will be brought to this state is not known. He has some relatives in Westerly.

MATHEMATICS TEACHERS.

Miss Laura White of This City One of the Speakers at Hartford.

The Association of Mathematical Teachers meet at Hartford, Saturday, Nov. 6, in room 32 of the Hartford public high school building. The program follows:

10.45 a. m. business meeting; 11.00, a syllabus of geometry for secondary schools (a) Possible service of a syllabus; (b) Possible outline of a syllabus; (c) Work of a national committee appointed by N. A. A. and by American federation of teachers of mathematics and natural sciences. Prof. H. E. Hawkes, Yale university; 1.00 p. m. luncheon; 2.00 p. m. business meeting; 2.15, Discussion of questions on line by Prof. Arthur E. Booth, New Haven, Prof. Homer W. Brainerd, of Hartford, Miss Laura A. White, of Norwich, Prof. J. G. Estill of Lakeland, and by members.

Hunters Get Deer.
The party of hunters which includes Frank B. Hall, Joseph B. Hall, Raymond Hall of this city and James H. Lopp of New London, who have been spending two weeks in Maine, have returned therefrom with five deer. They had a fine time.

To Enter Participants.
St. Mary's P. A. and B. society is to reward all the participants in "A Summer Carnival" with a social evening on Wednesday, Nov. 10. Those who generously assisted in the society in the production are promised a fine time in T. A. B. hall.

PERSONAL

George Wilkinson of Norwich spent Monday with friends in Middletown.

Miss Alice Patridge of Noank is making a week's visit with her mother in Norwich.

William Harris, Jr., who has been visiting his father in Brooklyn, Conn., has returned to Groton.

Miss Elsie Talbot returned to New York on Tuesday after a few days' stay at her home in this city.

Mr. and Mrs. Caspar Bailey have returned from their wedding trip and are occupying a newly furnished cottage at 503 1-2 North Main street.

Mr. and Mrs. Nathan A. Gibbs, with their daughters, the Misses Natalie and Mary, left Gales Ferry Monday for Norwich, having closed their home there for the winter months.

Mr. and Mrs. B. F. Pendleton of Norwich, Mr. and Mrs. George W. Partridge of Brewster, Neck, spent Sunday with relatives in Rockland, N. I., going and returning by trolley.

GRAND OFFICERS COMING.

Somerset Lodge Will Entertain on the 17th of This Month.

A visitation of the grand officers is to be made to Somerset lodge, No. 24, P. and A. M., on the 17th of this month, this being the annual official visitation, and it is expected that there will be a large number out to greet the visitors. Something in the way of spread will be provided and the officers will have the opportunity of witnessing some work.

On Tuesday evening at the meeting of St. James' lodge, No. 23, F. and A. M., two candidates were in the third degree, which will probably close the work for the lodge year.

William L. Larash of West Haven and William H. Nugent of Hartford were among the visitors at the Tuesday evening meeting.

WEDDING.

Davis—Main.

The marriage of Miss Eliza Main of Ledyard and Clarence A. Davis of Providence took place at the parsonage of the Old Mystic Baptist church by the pastor, Rev. Mr. Olmstead, at 12 o'clock Tuesday. The bride is a member of the church, and a popular young woman of Ledyard. The young man is of Providence, where he is engaged in the insurance business. The bride was attired in blue silk, and carried a bouquet of chrysanthemums. The ceremony was witnessed by a large number of guests. The reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. L. Main, in Mystic, where refreshments were served. They later took the train for Providence, where they will reside, a newly furnished home awaiting them.

OBITUARY.

Miss Martha Dayall.

On Tuesday evening the remains of Miss Martha Dayall, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Dayall of No. 289 Central avenue, arrived here from Lakeville, where she died on Tuesday from tuberculosis. The deceased was born here and was 11 years, 11 months and 16 days old.

Owen McKay.

On Tuesday morning Owen McKay died at his late home off Asylum street from consumption. He had been a sufferer with that disease for a long time. He was born here 52 years ago and has always resided here, being a son of the family. He was a hostler and was well known among the horsemen of the city.

IN THE CITY COURT.

Several Parents Presented for Not Sending Children to School.

In the city court on Tuesday morning Ernest Frost was presented on a complaint having been brought by going to the court after failing to show up on his case. He was allowed to settle it by paying $1 and costs.

There were no other cases presented in court on the charge of failing to send their children to school. They promised that the children should go to school, and their cases were continued until the 4th of December. Truant Agent Simonds appeared in the cases. A charge with throwing stones against West Side house had his case continued.

ARRESTED FOR DESERTION.

Charles Hyatt Arrested in New London—Has Been Away from Fort Michie Three Months.

On Tuesday in New London Charles Hyatt, who is a private at Fort Michie, was arrested for desertion, he having been away from his post since last July. He was brought by the government, a reward of $50 having been offered for his return.

New Lecture Desk.

In connection with the dedication of the new Gothic altar at the German Lutheran church last Sunday, there was also a new lecture desk put in use for the first time. This was a beautiful one in design with the altar, white with gold decorations, having a gold eagle standing on a gold ball on the top of the desk. The contributions for the altar were so generous that the lecture desk was also secured.

East Hampton—Cyprian Hossotte, a woodchopper and charcoal burner, aged 52, died suddenly about noon Sunday from heart disease.

"Cold in the Head"

To quickly cut short the distress of a severe cold in the head there is nothing better than

Smith's Laxative
Cold Tablets.

These well known tablets are a sure and positive cure for any and all colds.

They seldom, if ever, upset the system, nor do they cause buzzing in the head. Are free from BAD AFTER EFFECTS, and are just what you should always keep at hand to break up any cold at its very start.

Price 20 cents.

SMITH
The Drug Man,

Franklin Square, Norwich, Ct.
nov3d

URGENT MESSAGE FOR SERVICE

Urged By Dr. Stough at Union Revival—Plea that Campaign May Have Grand Effect Here—Services May Be Continued.

A big collection of flowers, most of them chrysanthemums, but including also asters and carnations, ranged along the front of the platform at the Army and on the platform steps was a magnificent display of the floral offering for the shut-in ones of the city and others who are prevented from attending the meetings, and the response to the plea for the middle cross tonight, said Dr. Stough, is your cross and mine where our sins were borne away. There is not much to-night we can do for the man that made us free from sin, but isn't it time for you to bring him what you have, even though may be like the poor little faded pink violets that the old negro placed on Grant's tomb in tribute to the man who made him free.

Then with surpassing eloquence, Dr. Stough carried his audience with him as he showed them Barabbas, the man that took his place and died for the sins of the world. The middle cross tonight, said Dr. Stough, is your cross and mine where our sins were borne away. There is not much to-night we can do for the man that made us free from sin, but isn't it time for you to bring him what you have, even though may be like the poor little faded pink violets that the old negro placed on Grant's tomb in tribute to the man who made him free.

In a short after meeting service Dr. Stough made an appeal that brought tears to many eyes and deeply stirred the hearts of the audience. He pleaded for a consecration for service, and with the appeal that this campaign might not be closed without touching the city of Norwich.

The executive committee has not learned yet whether it will be possible to hold the service on Wednesday night, but they are expecting to learn something definite on that point today.

Afternoon Service.
In the afternoon at 3 o'clock a well attended meeting was held at the First Baptist church, opened as usual with a song service led by Mr. Spooner. Prayers were offered by Rev. Dr. M. S. Kaufman and Rev. G. H. Ewing.

The scripture story of Jesus in Gethsemane and his sleepless disciples were read by Dr. Stough, from which he developed a sermon of deep spiritual touch. The picture of the disciples, the picture of the imperfect representation of our own attitude as we approach the Savior. Eight had been left outside the gate, and of the other three who went in, not one was able to enter into the innermost need of Gethsemane. The speaker referred to the great burden he felt on his heart, the burden of the imperfect representation of our own attitude as we approach the Savior. Eight had been left outside the gate, and of the other three who went in, not one was able to enter into the innermost need of Gethsemane. The speaker referred to the great burden he felt on his heart, the burden of the imperfect representation of our own attitude as we approach the Savior. Eight had been left outside the gate, and of the other three who went in, not one was able to enter into the innermost need of Gethsemane. The speaker referred to the great burden he felt on his heart, the burden of the imperfect representation of our own attitude as we approach the Savior. Eight had been left outside the gate, and of the other three who went in, not one was able to enter into the innermost need of Gethsemane. The speaker referred to the great burden he felt on his heart, the burden of the imperfect representation of our own attitude as we approach the Savior. Eight had been left outside the gate, and of the other three who went in, not one was able to enter into the innermost need of Gethsemane. The speaker referred to the great burden he felt on his heart, the burden of the imperfect representation of our own attitude as we approach the Savior. Eight had been left outside the gate, and of the other three who went in, not one was able to enter into the innermost need of Gethsemane. The speaker referred to the great burden he felt on his heart, the burden of the imperfect representation of our own attitude as we approach the Savior. Eight had been left outside the gate, and of the other three who went in, not one was able to enter into the innermost need of Gethsemane. The speaker referred to the great burden he felt on his heart, the burden of the imperfect representation of our own attitude as we approach the Savior. Eight had been left outside the gate, and of the other three who went in, not one was able to enter into the innermost need of Gethsemane. The speaker referred to the great burden he felt on his heart, the burden of the imperfect representation of our own attitude as we approach the Savior. Eight had been left outside the gate, and of the other three who went in, not one was able to enter into the innermost need of Gethsemane. The speaker referred to the great burden he felt on his heart, the burden of the imperfect representation of our own attitude as we approach the Savior. Eight had been left outside the gate, and of the other three who went in, not one was able to enter into the innermost need of Gethsemane. The speaker referred to the great burden he felt on his heart, the burden of the imperfect representation of our own attitude as we approach the Savior. Eight had been left outside the gate, and of the other three who went in, not one was able to enter into the innermost need of Gethsemane. The speaker referred to the great burden he felt on his heart, the burden of the imperfect representation of our own attitude as we approach the Savior. Eight had been left outside the gate, and of the other three who went in, not one was able to enter into the innermost need of Gethsemane. The speaker referred to the great burden he felt on his heart, the burden of the imperfect representation of our own attitude as we approach the Savior. Eight had been left outside the gate, and of the other three who went in, not one was able to enter into the innermost need of Gethsemane. The speaker referred to the great burden he felt on his heart, the burden of the imperfect representation of our own attitude as we approach the Savior. Eight had been left outside the gate, and of the other three who went in, not one was able to enter into the innermost need of Gethsemane. The speaker referred to the great burden he felt on his heart, the burden of the imperfect representation of our own attitude as we approach the Savior. Eight had been left outside the gate, and of the other three who went in, not one was able to enter into the innermost need of Gethsemane. The speaker referred to the great burden he felt on his heart, the burden of the imperfect representation of our own attitude as we approach the Savior. Eight had been left outside the gate, and of the other three who went in, not one was able to enter into the innermost need of Gethsemane. The speaker referred to the great burden he felt on his heart, the burden of the imperfect representation of our own attitude as we approach the Savior. Eight had been left outside the gate, and of the other three who went in, not one was able to enter into the innermost need of Gethsemane. The speaker referred to the great burden he felt on his heart, the burden of the imperfect representation of our own attitude as we approach the Savior. Eight had been left outside the gate, and of the other three who went in, not one was able to enter into the innermost need of Gethsemane. The speaker referred to the great burden he felt on his heart, the burden of the imperfect representation of our own attitude as we approach the Savior. Eight had been left outside the gate, and of the other three who went in, not one was able to enter into the innermost need of Gethsemane. The speaker referred to the great burden he felt on his heart, the burden of the imperfect representation of our own attitude as we approach the Savior. Eight had been left outside the gate, and of the other three who went in, not one was able to enter into the innermost need of Gethsemane. The speaker referred to the great burden he felt on his heart, the burden of the imperfect representation of our own attitude as we approach the Savior. Eight had been left outside the gate, and of the other three who went in, not one was able to enter into the innermost need of Gethsemane. The speaker referred to the great burden he felt on his heart, the burden of the imperfect representation of our own attitude as we approach the Savior. Eight had been left outside the gate, and of the other three who went in, not one was able to enter into the innermost need of Gethsemane. The speaker referred to the great burden he felt on his heart, the burden of the imperfect representation of our own attitude as we approach the Savior. Eight had been left outside the gate, and of the other three who went in, not one was able to enter into the innermost need of Gethsemane. The speaker referred to the great burden he felt on his heart, the burden of the imperfect representation of our own attitude as we approach the Savior. Eight had been left outside the gate, and of the other three who went in, not one was able to enter into the innermost need of Gethsemane. The speaker referred to the great burden he felt on his heart, the burden of the imperfect representation of our own attitude as we approach the Savior. Eight had been left outside the gate, and of the other three who went in, not one was able to enter into the innermost need of Gethsemane. The speaker referred to the great burden he felt on his heart, the burden of the imperfect representation of our own attitude as we approach the Savior. Eight had been left outside the gate, and of the other three who went in, not one was able to enter into the innermost need of Gethsemane. The speaker referred to the great burden he felt on his heart, the burden of the imperfect representation of our own attitude as we approach the Savior. Eight had been left outside the gate, and of the other three who went in, not one was able to enter into the innermost need of Gethsemane. The speaker referred to the great burden he felt on his heart, the burden of the imperfect representation of our own attitude as we approach the Savior. Eight had been left outside the gate, and of the other three who went in, not one was able to enter into the innermost need of Gethsemane. The speaker referred to the great burden he felt on his heart, the burden of the imperfect representation of our own attitude as we approach the Savior. Eight had been left outside the gate, and of the other three who went in, not one was able to enter into the innermost need of Gethsemane. The speaker referred to the great burden he felt on his heart, the burden of the imperfect representation of our own attitude as we approach the Savior. Eight had been left outside the gate, and of the other three who went in, not one was able to enter into the innermost need of Gethsemane. The speaker referred to the great burden he felt on his heart, the burden of the imperfect representation of our own attitude as we approach the Savior. Eight had been left outside the gate, and of the other three who went in, not one was able to enter into the innermost need of Gethsemane. The speaker referred to the great burden he felt on his heart, the burden of the imperfect representation of our own attitude as we approach the Savior. Eight had been left outside the gate, and of the other three who went in, not one was able to enter into the innermost need of Gethsemane. The speaker referred to the great burden he felt on his heart, the burden of the imperfect representation of our own attitude as we approach the Savior. Eight had been left outside the gate, and of the other three who went in, not one was able to enter into the innermost need of Gethsemane. The speaker referred to the great burden he felt on his heart, the burden of the imperfect representation of our own attitude as we approach the Savior. Eight had been left outside the gate, and of the other three who went in, not one was able to enter into the innermost need of Gethsemane. The speaker referred to the great burden he felt on his heart, the burden of the imperfect representation of our own attitude as we approach the Savior. Eight had been left outside the gate, and of the other three who went in, not one was able to enter into the innermost need of Gethsemane. The speaker referred to the great burden he felt on his heart, the burden of the imperfect representation of our own attitude as we approach the Savior. Eight had been left outside the gate, and of the other three who went in, not one was able to enter into the innermost need of Gethsemane. The speaker referred to the great burden he felt on his heart, the burden of the imperfect representation of our own attitude as we approach the Savior. Eight had been left outside the gate, and of the other three who went in, not one was able to enter into the innermost need of Gethsemane. The speaker referred to the great burden he felt on his heart, the burden of the imperfect representation of our own attitude as we approach the Savior. Eight had been left outside the gate, and of the other three who went in, not one was able to enter into the innermost need of Gethsemane. The speaker referred to the great burden he felt on his heart, the burden of the imperfect representation of our own attitude as we approach the Savior. Eight had been left outside the gate, and of the other three who went in, not one was able to enter into the innermost need of Gethsemane. The speaker referred to the great burden he felt on his heart, the burden of the imperfect representation of our own attitude as we approach the Savior. Eight had been left outside the gate, and of the other three who went in, not one was able to enter into the innermost need of Gethsemane. The speaker referred to the great burden he felt on his heart, the burden of the imperfect representation of our own attitude as we approach the Savior. Eight had been left outside the gate, and of the other three who went in, not one was able to enter into the innermost need of Gethsemane. The speaker referred to the great burden he felt on his heart, the burden of the imperfect representation of our own attitude as we approach the Savior. Eight had been left outside the gate, and of the other three who went in, not one was able to enter into the innermost need of Gethsemane. The speaker referred to the great burden he felt on his heart, the burden of the imperfect representation of our own attitude as we approach the Savior. Eight had been left outside the gate, and of the other three who went in, not one was able to enter into the innermost need of Gethsemane. The speaker referred to the great burden he felt on his heart, the burden of the imperfect representation of our own attitude as we approach the Savior. Eight had been left outside the gate, and of the other three who went in, not one was able to enter into the innermost need of Gethsemane. The speaker referred to the great burden he felt on his heart, the burden of the imperfect representation of our own attitude as we approach the Savior. Eight had been left outside the gate, and of the other three who went in, not one was able to enter into the innermost need of Gethsemane. The speaker referred to the great burden he felt on his heart, the burden of the imperfect representation of our own attitude as we approach the Savior. Eight had been left outside the gate, and of the other three who went in, not one was able to enter into the innermost need of Gethsemane. The speaker referred to the great burden he felt on his heart, the burden of the imperfect representation of our own attitude as we approach the Savior. Eight had been left outside the gate, and of the other three who went in, not one was able to enter into the innermost need of Gethsemane. The speaker referred to the great burden he felt on his heart, the burden of the imperfect representation of our own attitude as we approach the Savior. Eight had been left outside the gate, and of the other three who went in, not one was able to enter into the innermost need of Gethsemane. The speaker referred to the great burden he felt on his heart, the burden of the imperfect representation of our own attitude as we approach the Savior. Eight had been left outside the gate, and of the other three who went in, not one was able to enter into the innermost need of Gethsemane. The speaker referred to the great burden he felt on his heart, the burden of the imperfect representation of our own attitude as we approach the Savior. Eight had been left outside the gate, and of the other three who went in, not one was able to enter into the innermost need of Gethsemane. The speaker referred to the great burden he felt on his heart, the burden of the imperfect representation of our own attitude as we approach the Savior. Eight had been left outside the gate, and of the other three who went in, not one was able to enter into the innermost need of Gethsemane. The speaker referred to the great burden he felt on his heart, the burden of the imperfect representation of our own attitude as we approach the Savior. Eight had been left outside the gate, and of the other three who went in, not one was able to enter into the innermost need of Gethsemane. The speaker referred to the great burden he felt on his heart, the burden of the imperfect representation of our own attitude as we approach the Savior. Eight had been left outside the gate, and of the other three who went in, not one was able to enter into the innermost need of Gethsemane. The speaker referred to the great burden he felt on his heart, the burden of the imperfect representation of our own attitude as we approach the Savior. Eight had been left outside the gate, and of the other three who went in, not one was able to enter into the innermost need of Gethsemane. The speaker referred to the great burden he felt on his heart, the burden of the imperfect representation of our own attitude as we approach the Savior. Eight had been left outside the gate, and of the other three who went in, not one was able to enter into the innermost need of Gethsemane. The speaker referred to the great burden he felt on his heart, the burden of the imperfect representation of our own attitude as we approach the Savior. Eight had been left outside the gate, and of the other three who went in, not one was able to enter into the innermost need of Gethsemane. The speaker referred to the great burden he felt on his heart, the burden of the imperfect representation of our own attitude as we approach the Savior. Eight had been left outside the gate, and of the other three who went in, not one was able to enter into the innermost need of Gethsemane. The speaker referred to the great burden he felt on his heart, the burden of the imperfect representation of our own attitude as we approach the Savior. Eight had been left outside the gate, and of the other three who went in, not one was able to enter into the innermost need of Gethsemane. The speaker referred to the great burden he felt on his heart, the burden of the imperfect representation of our own attitude as we approach the Savior. Eight had been left outside the gate, and of the other three who went in, not one was able to enter into the innermost need of Gethsemane. The speaker referred to the great burden he felt on his heart, the burden of the imperfect representation of our own attitude as we approach the Savior. Eight had been left outside the gate, and of the other three who went in, not one was able to enter into the innermost need of Gethsemane. The speaker referred to the great burden he felt on his heart, the burden of the imperfect representation of our own attitude as we approach the Savior. Eight had been left outside the gate, and of the other three who went in, not one was able to enter into the innermost need of Gethsemane. The speaker referred to the great burden he felt on his heart, the burden of the imperfect representation of our own attitude as we approach the Savior. Eight had been left outside the gate, and of the other three who went in, not one was able to enter into the innermost need of Gethsemane. The speaker referred to the great burden he felt on his heart, the burden of the imperfect representation of our own attitude as we approach the Savior. Eight had been left outside the gate, and of the other three who went in, not one was able to enter into the innermost need of Gethsemane. The speaker referred to the great burden he felt on his heart, the burden of the imperfect representation of our own attitude as we approach the Savior. Eight had been left outside the gate, and of the other three who went in, not one was able to enter into the innermost need of Gethsemane. The speaker referred to the great burden he felt on his heart, the burden of the imperfect representation of our own attitude as we approach the Savior. Eight had been left outside the gate, and of the other three who went in, not one was able to enter into the innermost need of Gethsemane. The speaker referred to the great burden he felt on his heart, the burden of the imperfect representation of our own attitude as we approach the Savior. Eight had been left outside the gate, and of the other three who went in, not one was able to enter into the innermost need of Gethsemane. The speaker referred to the great burden he felt on his heart, the burden of the imperfect representation of our own attitude as we approach the Savior. Eight had been left outside the gate, and of the other three who went in, not one was able to enter into the innermost need of Gethsemane. The speaker referred to the great burden he felt on his heart, the burden of the imperfect representation of our own attitude as we approach the Savior. Eight had been left outside the gate, and of the other three who went in, not one was able to enter into the innermost need of Gethsemane. The speaker referred to the great burden he felt on his heart, the burden of the imperfect representation of our own attitude as we approach the Savior. Eight had been left outside the gate, and of the other three who went in, not one was able to enter into the innermost need of Gethsemane. The speaker referred to the great burden he felt on his heart, the burden of the imperfect representation of our own attitude as we approach the Savior. Eight had been left outside the gate, and of the other three who went in, not one was able to enter into the innermost need of Gethsemane. The speaker referred to the great burden he felt on his heart, the burden of the imperfect representation of our own attitude as we approach the Savior. Eight had been left outside the gate, and of the other three who went in, not one was able to enter into the innermost need of Gethsemane. The speaker referred to the great burden he felt on his heart, the burden of the imperfect representation of our own attitude as we approach the Savior. Eight had been left outside the gate, and of the other three who went in, not one was able to enter into the innermost need of Gethsemane. The speaker referred to the great burden he felt on his heart, the burden of the imperfect representation of our own attitude as we approach the Savior. Eight had been left outside the gate, and of the other three who went in, not one was able to enter into the innermost need of Gethsemane. The speaker referred to the great burden he felt on his heart, the burden of the imperfect representation of our own attitude as we approach the Savior. Eight had been left outside the gate, and of the other three who went in, not one was able to enter into the innermost need of Gethsemane. The speaker referred to the great burden he felt on his heart, the burden of the imperfect representation of our own attitude as we approach the Savior. Eight had been left outside the gate, and of the other three who went in, not one was able to enter into the innermost need of Gethsemane. The speaker referred to the great burden he felt on his heart, the burden of the imperfect representation of our own attitude as we approach the Savior. Eight had been left outside the gate, and of the other three who went in, not one was able to enter into the innermost need of Gethsemane. The speaker referred to the great burden he felt on his heart, the burden of